Your family has applied for your return.

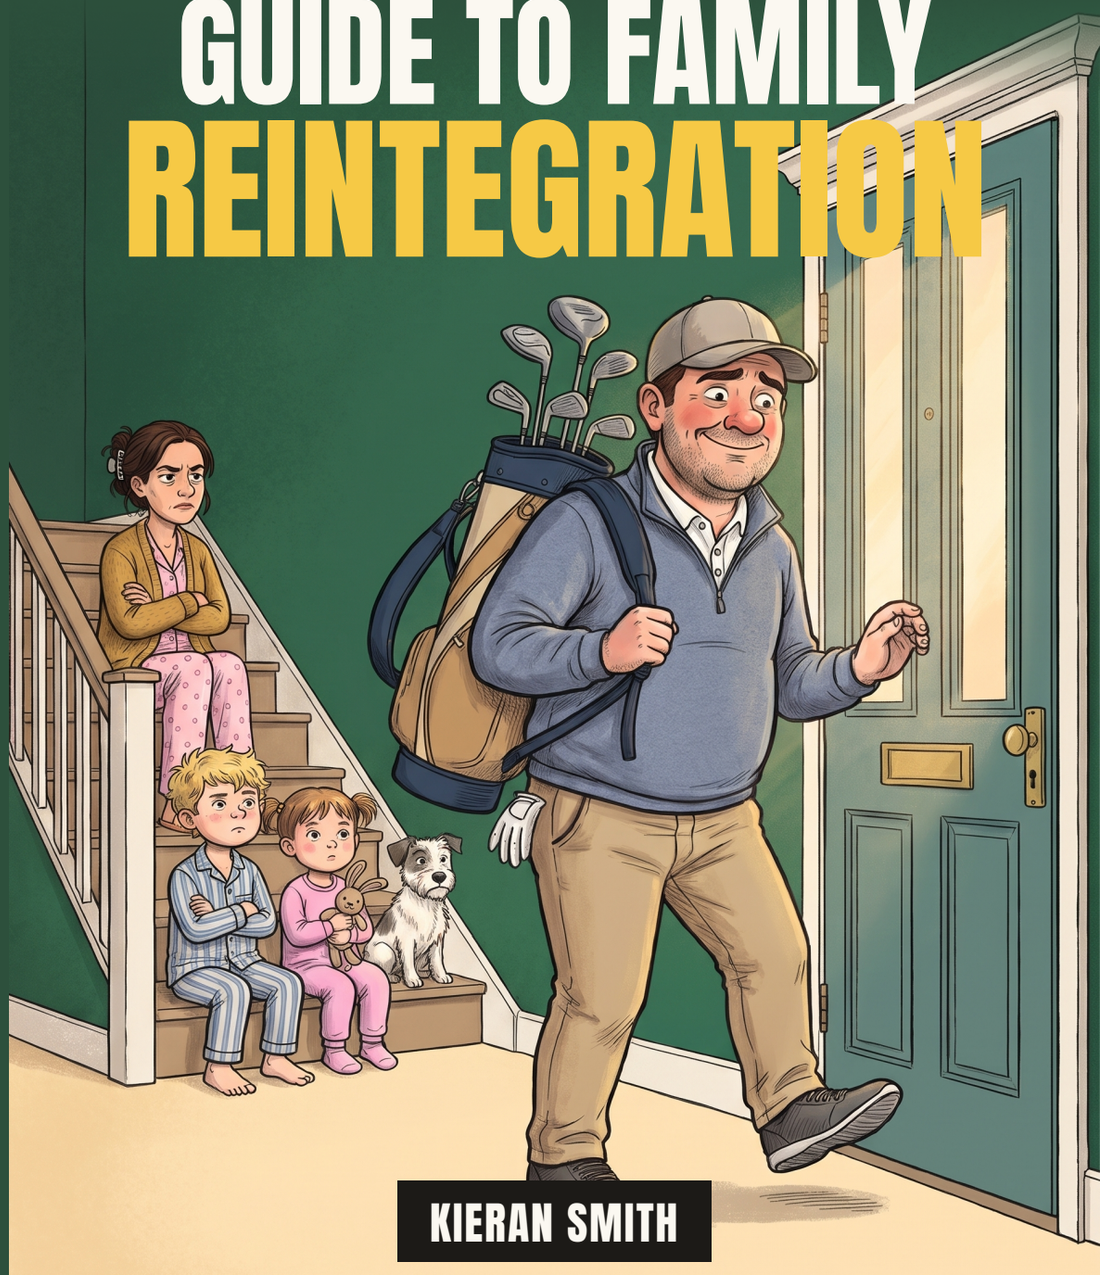

For years you have been on a long tour of duty at the golf club. You have missed birthdays, bath times and most of Sunday. You have described the putt on the 7th roughly four hundred times, including once during a minute's silence.

This is the official Family Reintegration Programme: eight stages, twenty-four activities, a relapse-prevention plan for the first sunny Saturday in April and a certificate at the end, if you earn it.

For every golfer who pops out for a quick nine and comes back in the dark, and for everyone waiting at home with his tea under cling film.
